CIVILITY

An American Conversations keynote by Deborah Mower

Civility in Politics and Education
Keynote by Deborah Mower
Thursday, February 13, 7 PM
Loosemore Auditorium, GVSU Pew Campus

Deborah Mower examines the concept of civility and the conditions of civil disagreement in politics and education. Although many assume that civility is merely polite behavior, it functions to aid rational discourse. She offers multiple accounts of civility and its contribution to citizenship, deliberative democracy, and education. Given that civility is essential to all aspects of public life, it is important to address how civility may be taught. This Hauenstein Center event is brought to you with support from GVSU's Department of Philosophy.

AMERICAN CONVERSATIONS:
THE RIGHTEOUS MIND - JONATHAN HAIDT

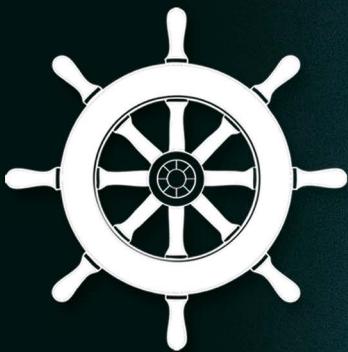

Tuesday, October 22 at 7 PM
Eberhard Center at Grand Valley State University
301 Fulton Street West, Grand Rapids, MI 49504

Social psychologist Jonathan Haidt has done the seemingly impossible—challenged conventional thinking about morality, politics, and religion in a way that speaks to everyone on the political spectrum. He shows how moral judgments arise not from reason but from gut feelings. He shows why liberals, conservatives, and libertarians have such different intuitions about right and wrong, and he shows why each side is actually right about many of its central concerns. The Hauenstein Center is partnering with the Business Ethics Center at Grand Valley State University for this event.

AMERICAN CONVERSATIONS:
COOLIDGE by AMITY SHLAES
Thursday, November 21, 7 PM
Gerald R. Ford Presidential Museum
303 Pearl St NW, Grand Rapids, MI 49504

Amity Shlaes delivers a brilliant and provocative reexamination of Calvin Coolidge and the decade of unparalleled growth that the nation enjoyed under his leadership. Coolidge restored national trust in Washington and left office with a federal budget smaller than the one he inherited. Renowned as a throwback, Coolidge was in fact strikingly modern—an advocate of women's suffrage and a radio pioneer. Our 30th president gestures to the country we once were, and reminds us of qualities we had forgotten and can use today. This event is in partnership with the Acton Institute and Gerald R. Ford Foundation and Museum.

RALPH HAUENSTEIN

A LIFE OF LEADERSHIP AND SERVICE

Grand Valley State University, through its Hauenstein Center for Presidential Studies, is proud to present its most prestigious award – the COL Ralph W. Hauenstein Fellowship.

This fellowship was created in recognition of COL Hauenstein's extraordinary life, which exemplifies the service and leadership that Grand Valley State University seeks to inspire in its graduates.

Past recipients include Secretary of State Madeleine Albright, President Gerald R. Ford, and National Security Advisor Brent Scowcroft.

"In the 20th century, I saw with my own eyes the worst that leaders are capable of. In the 21st century, I want to encourage the best leadership possible so that the world will be better for my children's children."

–Ralph Hauenstein

THE HAUENSTEIN CENTER AT GRAND VALLEY STATE UNIVERSITY

COOK LEADERSHIP ACADEMY

The Academy serves university students at all levels of their development. Emerging leaders strive to become more ethical and effective in their communities through mentorships and constant engagement with experienced professionals. The Cook Leadership Academy, within the Hauenstein Center, has become one of the Midwest's pre-eminent centers for the exploration and development of leadership excellence.

WORLD-CLASS EVENTS

Talks, debates, workshops, and conferences around common ground inform citizens, leaders, and emergent leaders who seek to understand their role in solving the challenges that communities, states, and nations face. We host up to 30 world-class events each year. Students have been face-to-face with four U.S. presidents, two vice presidents, four first ladies, four secretaries of state, six state governors, numerous business and nonprofit executives, multiple Pulitzer Prize winner, a Grammy Award winner, and a national championship basketball coach.

WEBSITE & SOCIAL MEDIA

Hauensteincenter.org, in addition to our social media, opens a window to the world on the scholarship we have produced as a presidential studies center, and the programs we have offered through our leadership academy. More than 27 years' worth of video, transcripts, and original scholarship grow daily. In ten years, our website has drawn more than 30 million hits from around the globe.

BOOK COLLECTIONS

Our collections have been recognized by the Library of Congress as "a uniquely valuable resource." No other place on earth houses, in one room, all the books written by U.S. presidents.

We are proud to have one of the Midwest's leading espionage and intelligence collections. We also have recently received a collection of books authored by many of our first ladies.

HAUENSTEIN CENTER IMPACT

Our Common Ground Initiative prepares a new generation of leaders to work constructively with people from diverse cultures and different worldviews. Our initiative is unique in higher education today. No other public university in the U.S. is offering a balanced, comprehensive exploration (and redefinition) of what it means to be conservative and what it means to be progressive in the 21st century.

The Hauenstein Center brings these diverse camps onto the same stage to search for actionable common ground. We believe that through principled civic engagement and civil discourse, there are more possibilities between progressives and conservatives to work together than usually realized or acknowledged.

Our initiative is a nationwide effort. Committed to the best practices of civil debate, mediation, and negotiation, we bring together community leaders in an open, respectful, intellectually honest forum to confront the political, economic, social, and cultural challenges Americans face. Our initiative welcomes partnerships and training opportunities with organizations in West Michigan and throughout the state and nation.

Connecting Generations

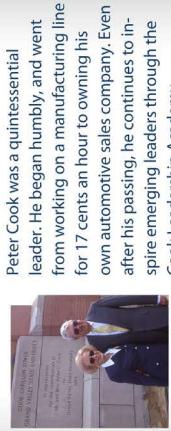

Fostering Civic Engagement

Educating Emerging Leaders

Peter Cook

Peter Cook was a quintessential leader. He began humbly, and went from working on a manufacturing line for 17 cents an hour to owning his own automotive sales company. Even after his passing, he continues to inspire emerging leaders through the Cook Leadership Academy.

As he completed his studies, Peter moved into the accounting office at Kelvinator, then Blackmer Pump, then by 1948 Ranger, Inc. It was there he met a most important mentor, Howard Sluiter, who provided the opportunities and encouragement that were vital to Peter's early success.

Sluiter had a passion for speedy automobiles. He would later work with Bill France Sr. (founder of NASCAR) and Clint Murchison Jr. (founder of the Dallas Cowboys) to finance the Daytona International Speedway. In 1948, Sluiter began importing MG and Jaguar sports cars from England and he made Peter his salesman. Soon, Peter found himself piloting high-speed test-drives with potential buyers down the middle of the Kent County Airport runway. By 1950, Sluiter had a company — Import Motors Limited, Inc. — and he had an extremely capable employee in Peter.

Within a few years, Peter demonstrated his ability to take the helm. Immediately following World War II, between 1945 and 1948, the British and the Russians controlled industrial production within war-torn Germany. As West Germans regained control in the early 1950s, automobile manufacturing became a symbol of the nation's recovery. Volkswagen in particular — Hitler's "people's car" — was exporting 70,000 automobiles a year by 1953.

"The two most important things in giving are being willing and being able. By far the most important is being willing."

Ralph Hauenstein

He has been a journalist, war hero, entrepreneur, and philanthropist, and he's not finished yet. At 102 years of age, Ralph Hauenstein has lived an extraordinary life that exemplifies the service and leadership Grand Valley State University seeks to inspire in its graduates. Born in Fort Wayne, Indiana, in 1912, Hauenstein moved to Grand Rapids at the age of 12 and has called Michigan home ever since.

One of his earliest memories — he was five or six years old — was of handing out candy to doughtboys leaving their mid-western homes for the battlefields of France. As a twelve-year-old Boy Scout, he assisted Civil War veterans from the Grand Army of the Republic meeting in Grand Rapids. They arrived in Grand Rapids by car — and by horse.

Hauenstein went to Central High School in Grand Rapids, where he ran track and played on the football team. It was on the gridiron that he ran into the future 38th president of the United States, Gerald R. Ford, who played on a rival team. They would become lifelong friends.

Hauenstein's formal service to our nation began in 1935. That year, at the age of 23, he saw the "gathering storm" over Europe and sensed that the United States would become embroiled in a future conflict with totalitarian regimes, so he underwent officer training in the U.S. Army. The following year Hauenstein was commissioned as second lieutenant and became commander of an all-African-American Civilian Conservation Corps camp near Cadillac, Michigan. Already as a young commander, he demonstrated a far-sighted commitment to civil rights by expanding the opportunities of the African Americans with whom he served.

After two and one-half years on active duty, Hauenstein returned to civilian life as journalist and shortly became city editor of the Grand Rapids Herald. He was only 27 years old, yet already supervising 16 seasoned reporters.

HAUENSTEIN
CENTER

Ralph Hauenstein

In December 1940, one year before the attack on Pearl Harbor, he returned to active duty. During the Second World War, he was based mostly in Iceland and in London, and rapidly rose to the rank of colonel. As chief of the intelligence Branch in ETOUSA, the Army's European theater of operations, he worked under General Dwight Eisenhower. In 1944-45, traveling to the Continent on a mission to find Hitler and other Nazi leaders, he was among the first Americans into liberated Paris, war-torn Germany, and Nazi concentration camps. It was in Paris that he made one of his most notorious decisions — to close French brothels because they were where American soldiers were prone to let military secrets slip. Col. Hauenstein was subsequently awarded the French Croix de Guerre with Palm and Legion of Honor. The U.K. awarded him their Order of the British Empire.

The destruction caused by warring dictators and militant ideologies steered in Hauenstein the resolve to work for better international relations and peaceful solutions to conflict. Reflecting on his wartime experiences, the highly decorated colonel said, "In the twentieth century, I saw with my own eyes the worst that leaders are capable of. In the twenty-first century, I want to encourage the best leadership possible so that the world will be better for my children's children."

After the war, Hauenstein saw opportunities to build bridges between the United States and a Europe devastated by war. He went into international trade, establishing Tri-Continental Trading Company in New York City.

Tri-Continental partnered with European enterprises to provide goods and services to consumers in Europe, the Middle East, South America, the Caribbean, and elsewhere where democracies and free-market economies were struggling. He was the owner of Werner Lehara of Grand Rapids, a food equipment manufacturer that brought Goldfish crackers, Andes mints, Windmill cookies, pastas, and many other foods to Americans.

Peter Cook

A philanthropist as well as a risk-taker, Hauenstein undrewrote a modern bakery in Haiti, providing jobs for hundreds of workers and thousands of individual distributors at a difficult time in that nation's history. He also set up a school in Florida that taught people from developing countries how to run a fully-automated bakery and provide good jobs in their local economies.

During the Eisenhower administration, Col. Hauenstein reunited with his old boss to serve as a consultant on the President's Advisory Commission. In the mid 1960s, he also served as an auditor at the Second Vatican Council in Rome.

By his own admission, Col. Hauenstein has never retired. At the age of 102, he works almost every day and is active in numerous causes. He was part of the team that in 1996 supervised the first free elections in Russia. His philanthropy has benefited a variety of organizations devoted to education and medical research in West Michigan. He served on the board that founded the Van Andel Institute and helped establish the neurological center at St. Mary's Hospital in Grand Rapids. At Grand Valley State University, his generosity made possible the founding of the Hauenstein Center for Presidential Studies, whose mission is to inspire a new generation of leaders devoted to public service.

When the rock star Bono came to Grand Rapids in 2006 and learned the scope of Hauenstein's charitable and educational endeavors, he called Ralph Hauenstein "a cool cat."

We agree. He remains active in Hauenstein Center programs to this day — a treasure to our students and to all who know him.

Peter Cook

They also gave to the arts, helping fund new buildings for the Grand Rapids Art Museum and the Grand Rapids Civic Theater, while also supporting programs by the Grand Rapids Symphony, Opera Grand Rapids, and the Broadway Theater Guild.

They also donated to the Grandville Avenue Academy for the Arts, located in the neighborhood of Peter's birth. They supported numerous other construction projects and programs in the community, and they gave to political candidates and causes.

The rising generation of leaders can take lessons from Peter's story. Even in tough economic times, we can have faith and build a foundation for success. We must be patient in our apprenticeships. Good mentors are invaluable. We cannot be shy when opportunities arrive. We must have foresight. Humility and respect for others go a long way. We must be willing to give, even before we feel able. Perhaps most surprisingly, humble aspirations — to make a life, a living, and a contribution — can change the face of a community.

Peter and his best friend — Ralph Hauenstein, founding benefactor of the Hauenstein Center — continue to shape Grand Rapids today. Educational, medical and cultural buildings stand across the city as a memorial to the philanthropic spirit of Peter, Ralph, and others of their generation.

Peter Cook's footprints can be found all over Grand Rapids in organizations dedicated to higher education, worship, scientific research, medicine, and the arts. He has built two successful companies, served on more than two-dozen private and nonprofit boards, and his family's generosity has quite literally changed the landscape of his community. By all accounts, he has been a stunningly successful and consequential leader.

"Making [money] is work, but giving it away is fun," Peter said. "It's a blessing to be able to help people." Peter and Pat supported colleges and universities, as evidenced by buildings bearing their name at eight schools in the region. Their generosity also makes possible the Peter J. Cook Leadership Academy at Grand Valley's Hauenstein Center for Presidential Studies. The couple also contributed generously to the health sciences, helping a cutting-edge industry grow in Grand Rapids.
